Zoos and Aquariums of the World

The zoos and aquariums of the world, together with a number of institutions with important animal collections, such as primate research centres, universities and bird parks, are listed alphabetically under the towns in which they are situated; the towns, in turn, are listed alphabetically under their country and, in the case of institutions in the United States and Canada, under the state as well. Institutions that are not open to the public or can be visited by appointment only are given at the end of the general list for the country concerned. In most cases, attendance and animal figures refer to 2015. Addresses, telephone and fax numbers, and staff names refer to 2016 or are updated to the most recent information made available to us. The abbreviation Att: means the number of visitors during 2015. Figures for animals relate to 31 December 2015. The date of last update is given at the end of each institution. In general, information has not been included if it predates 2014. Where an institution is a member of a national or regional association the acronym for the association appears at the end of the entry. Names of associations used in this list and, where possible, relevant Web addresses appear at the end of the Zoos and Aquariums of the World Index. Where possible, membership information was taken from official association Web sites.

The Editors wish to emphasize strongly that the information contained in the following list has been supplied solely by the zoos concerned and has not been subjected to editorial verification or inspection. This directory is intended solely as an address list and guide to existing zoos and aquariums, and inclusion in it in no way implies that the Editors, The Zoological Society of London or Wiley approve or recommend the establishment in question.
